

Immune Boosting after Chemotherapy

by Charmaine du Toit

Acute myeloid leukemia (AML), also known as acute myelogenous leukemia, is a cancer of the myeloid line of white blood cells, characterized by the rapid proliferation of abnormal cells which accumulate in the bone marrow and interfere with the production of normal blood cells. AML is the most common acute leukemia affecting adults, and its incidence increases with age.

I was diagnosed with Chronic Myeloid Leukemia on 3 March 1999 - for those of you who are not familiar with the disease - in a nutshell it is a disease where the white blood cells keep increasing rapidly and take over the work of the red blood cells.

A dear friend and health consultant immediately introduced me to BarleyLife. I remember when she gave me the container of BarleyLife, I was in the Panorama Hospital, Cape Town. I was so eager to get started that I took the container and immediately went to the bathroom, without her knowledge. I took a dosage which I thought would be sufficient for my condition - in fact it was far far too much!.

It took a serious illness to make me realise the importance of good nutrition

When I told my friend how much I had taken, she replied, "I think I'll go home", and she spent the rest of the night in prayer. I learnt from this event that it is important when starting BarleyLife to take the correct dosage. Of course, like so many of us, it took a serious illness to make me realise the importance of a good nutritional supplementation such as the AIM products.

From Panorama Hospital in Cape Town, I was transferred over to the Haematology Department at the Constantiaberg Medi-Clinic for a bone marrow transplant. The preparation for the transplant was chemotherapy, after which I was placed in the bone-marrow unit. I had to undergo more chemotherapy and radiation treatment. On entering the unit, one is placed in a room alone and one has to remain there for 5 to 6 weeks - But I was only there for 4.. Nothing from outside is allowed in the room, e.g. flowers, magazines, cards etc., as your immune system is wiped out.

I was fed via a drip and was allowed BarleyLife

I was not allowed to have fresh fruit or vegetables or share anything with other people; cooked food may not be reheated.

Whilst in the unit, I was fed via a drip and was allowed BarleyLife. I lost all my body hair and nails, but they grew back fairly quickly - which I believe was due to BarleyLife. BarleyLife has been a part of my life since 3rd March 1999 and remains so. I will continue using this product as it has become part of ME.

What we eat and drink is what we are or become

During this time, I discovered the most important things in my life; my relationships with God, spouse, children, family and friends - and a product called BarleyLife.

I believe BarleyLife is the BEST product on the market to boost your immune system.
